

The Last of It's Kind

ENTRY #25

I hope that your calculations have matched mine and you realize this entry is NUMBER 25. If not I will be very upset, but I suppose I'll get over it.

When I first heard of the journal grade I was not very excited, but after I began writing I found that it wasn't too difficult. Yet I am still excited that I have accomplished the 3,125 words required for an A grade.

This one is a bit more difficult to finish than the others because my room mate will not shut up. No matter how uninterested I act in what she is saying or how many times she realizes she is bothering me, she will go right back to talking to me. Well good she left to go to the restroom (we have community baths.)

Well all I really want to say is that I wrote this journal so that I could look back on what I wrote previously and remember not so that you could. This is why I have turned it in on Wednesday instead of Thursday. I would really like to get my journal back before the end of the semester. If I can't I will understand, but would really appreciate it if I could.

Thank you for your creative writing - I can see you are a natural thinker (you use store paper).
Thank-You,
Amy

No Pencil